higher preoperative IL-6 levels, higher risk of postoperative complications, and less QOL improvements as compared to patients with lower postoperative IL-6 levels. Therefore, our findings imply that reduction of intraoperative postoperative IL-6 production is important to prevent postoperative complications. Several studies have revealed the role of IL-6 on postoperative complications in breast cancer patients. In recent meta-analysis, IL-6 gene polymorphisms \[IL-6 -174 G/C and IL-6 -572 C/G\] were associated with higher risk of breast cancer-related complications \[[@CR27]\]. In addition, IL-6 serum concentrations (from preoperative to postoperative) were associated with increased risk of complication in children with heart surgery \[[@CR28]\]. Recently, the relationship between circulating IL-6 and complication in patients with colorectal cancer after surgery was investigated. The authors revealed that high level of preoperative IL-6 was associated with anastomotic leakage \[[@CR11]\]. Our findings are consistent with these previous studies \[[@CR6],[@CR9],[@CR11]\]. Nevertheless, these previous studies have not evaluated the influence of intraoperative IL-6 production. We also observed that high-grade fever and elevated levels of inflammatory markers were associated with high postoperative IL-6 production. Previous studies revealed that an increase of postoperative C-reactive protein was associated with an increase of preoperative

IL-6 levels \[[@CR6]\]. Other studies have reported similar relationship between postoperative CRP levels and operative time \[[@CR29]\]. Therefore, our observations are consistent with previous studies. However, there were no studies that investigated the association between postoperative complications and preoperative inflammatory markers. Moreover, our results showed that elevated preoperative IL-6 levels predicted longer postoperative hospitalization, more frequent postoperative complications, and less improvement of QOL. Similarly, other studies have reported that elevated serum IL-6 levels were associated with a longer hospitalization, poor surgical outcome, and decreased QOL \[[@CR6],[@CR9],[@CR10]\]. The results of a previous study also showed that increased levels of postoperative IL-6 were associated with increased risk of postoperative complications \[[@CR9]\]. Although the mechanisms explaining the relation between elevated preoperative IL-6 levels and postoperative complications are not fully understood,

This past season, one surprise performer was the Bruins' point guard, Malcolm Lagana, Jr., a former big-time point guard at Clemson University. Lagana was a guest on the Boston Sports Live on 93.7 The Ticket's "The Drive" with Scott Zolak, where he revealed that former Boston College assistant Jim Christiano is a potential head-coaching candidate. "I think he's a good coach," Lagana said. "I'd love to play for him."

Christiano, meanwhile, said that he would consider staying in Florida if he were asked to take the Florida Gulf Coast head-coaching job. "To me, this is a very challenging, exciting place to be at," Christiano said. "I'm not looking to go somewhere else. They're going to get somebody with an aggressive mentality and a coach that's not afraid to say 'Let's go.' And that's a hard sell if you're not yourself." He added that it's important to him that a successful program has good results on the court. "I like the challenges of being around that," he said. "I understand what the process is. I understand the program, and I understand their expectations. I think they can be as good as any team in this league."It was the worst financial year in the history of journalism. In England, the IPPR has just released its long-awaited comprehensive investigation into the state of the UK media today and it's not pretty. Across print and digital, news coverage and political coverage and comment has shrunk. The UK's media has lost over half its market share since 1989. The number of journalists has declined by half a million over the last 30 years. Television jobs have been in decline since the mid 1990s. Print jobs have been in decline since the early 1990s. Comment is currently the only sector that seems to be growing. The report finds that journalists are on average earning less than they were in the mid 1990s, the start of Rupert Murdoch's near decade of consolidation and of the digital revolution which still is unfolding. But it gets worse, the IPPR warns that the crisis in journalism is only half the story and that it's not confined to Britain either.
